

Hi, my name is Lateef McLeod

and I am a writer and scholar.

In this video, I want to discuss an artist
that is highlighted in the book of my friend Leroy Moore entitled "Black Disabled Art History 101."

The artist that I picked was India Harville.

Miss Harville was selected to be a part of this book
because of her successful career
as a Black disabled dance teacher and performer.

Since I had an opportunity to work with her
in a Sins Invalid performance,

I saw firsthand her dedication to her craft.

She also dedicates her time to serve
the disability community as a community healer.

So I'm honored to know her and call her my friend.

The importance of "Black Disabled Art History 101"
can't be understated

and should be obvious to everyone.

Leroy Moore put together a collection
of Black disabled Artists

that should be widely known by everyone
and should be chronicled in mainstream history books.

This book should be taught in schools,
especially in primary schools,
so that children can learn Black disabled contributions
to Art history from a young age.

Thank you for your time.

Hi, my name is Lateef McLeod

and I am a writer and scholar.

In this video, I want to discuss an artist
that is highlighted in the book of my friend Leroy Moore
entitled "Black Disabled Art History 101."

The artist that I picked was India Harville.
Miss Harville was selected to be a part of this book
because of her successful career
as a Black disabled dance teacher and performer.
Since I had an opportunity to work with her
in a Sins Invalid performance,
I saw firsthand her dedication to her craft.
She also dedicates her time to serve
the disability community as a community healer.
So I'm honored to know her and call her my friend.
The importance of "Black Disabled Art History 101"
can't be understated
and should be obvious to everyone.
Leroy Moore put together a collection
of Black disabled Artists
that should be widely known by everyone
and should be chronicled in mainstream history books.
This book should be taught in schools,
especially in primary schools,
so that children can learn Black disabled contributions
to Art history from a young age.
Thank you for your time.